Jagdeep Dhankhar, the Vice President of India, while delivering his inaugural address at All India Management Association's (AIMA) 49th National Management Convention, held in New Delhi, said, "Today, India is counting on its entrepreneurial generation to lead economic growth by creating new enterprises, new jobs, new exports and new solutions to the developmental problems. India's rich human resources are recognised globally, and they need to be further harnessed to maximise India's advantage on the world stage." "We have an import of at least 16 lakh crores of fossil fuel and that is a big problem for the country as it creates pollution. We have taken a decision to make 27 green express highways to reduce time and pollution," said Nitin Gadkari, Minister of Road Transport and Highways, Government of India, while speaking at the convention. He laid emphasis on using public transport and added that new research and innovation on public transport, which can run using sustainable fuel, is imperative. Highlighting India's potential to
